

MANAGEMENT & ORGANIZATION

Leadership. Innovation and design thinking. Problem solving to create strategic solutions that have a positive impact on the people you work with, the stakeholders you serve and the greater human community.

As a consulting major in the Management & Organization Department, you will develop the ability to understand how and why organizations change, how employees and the market react to the change, and where to look for strategic opportunities for growth. Students prepare for careers in diverse industries, from financial institutions to professional sports management.

Undergraduate Studies

M&O MAJOR

The Management Consulting (MGTC) major prepares students to manage people and processes in both large and small organizations and to consult with organizations on these issues. The major includes courses in international management, business problem solving and strategic HR management, as well as the opportunity to learn leading-edge management technologies and techniques such as data storytelling, IT project management and quantitative data modeling.

M&O MINOR

Open to all Notre Dame undergraduates, students in the Innovation & Entrepreneurship minor join other innovators to develop a mindset of innovation and to learn how to create new ventures, from product development to funding. Through a partnership with the Notre Dame IDEA Center, a state-of-the-art innovation hub, students develop business skills, gain real-world experience and learn firsthand what it takes to bring ideas to life.

MENDOZA COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

“From empathy and human-centered design, to effective communication and teamwork, to deeply analytical and technical skills, the Management Consulting curriculum truly immerses students in the world of business and enables them to holistically craft solutions for real-world issues.”

Madi Purrenhage (MGTC '19)
